The Life Members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People constitute an Honor Guard of Americans, who have determined to give their fullest support, morally and financially, to the NAACP's vital work for a more democratic American society.

NAACP Life Members have enlisted permanently in the Association and in so doing have contributed the sum of Five Hundred Dollars to help support the Association's program.

Occupying a prominent position in the lobby of the Association's National office is a huge bronze wall plaque upon which are inscribed the names of fully paid-up NAACP Life Members, now numbering more than 2,000. Among these are such notables as Jawaharlal Nehru, the late Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Ralph J. Bunche, Jackie Robinson, Harry Golden, Miss Marian Anderson, Adam C. Powell, Nelson Rockefeller, Averell Harriman, Duke Ellington, Alan Paton, Martin Luther King, Jr., Aga Khan IV, Sammy Davis, Jr., Harry Belafonte, Floyd Patterson, Stephen Gill Spottswood, Miss Lena Horne, Herbert Lehman, Robert C. Weaver, Nat "King" Cole, Richard Rodgers, Edward R. Dudley, Louis Jordan and many others.

Each Life Member receives an individual plaque attesting to his "Faith in the Cause and Future of the Negro in the United States and in the Foundation Principles of the American Republic."
